

Bereavement Care

Padfields Funeral Service is committed to offering a caring and personal service to help you cope with the trauma of arranging the funeral of your loved one.

We are also committed to helping you through the whole grieving process of which the funeral is only the beginning.

Now that the funeral is over, we would like to assure you that we are still here to offer caring support and advice to you or any members of your family who may require it. Please do not hesitate to telephone us or call in.

For some people the funeral of a loved one can help them to get over their loss quite quickly, but for most people it takes much longer – months or even years – to come to terms with what has happened. We are always here to offer a listening ear. But you may feel that you need to speak to a trained bereavement counsellor who will help you to work through your feelings over a period of time.

Those of you who are religious will probably find that your minister or priest will be the best person to talk to.

For those of you who are not religious, or even those who are but feel that they need something more, there are a number of other organisations that can help you. The main one being ...
